

This novel will begin in Barcelona, Spain, where a traveling group from England is invaded by a young American man on a motorcycle. An instant attraction develops between this American and one of the lady travelers in the group. The group, along with the American and his motorcycle, take the ferry to the island of Mallorca. A romance develops as the group experiences many wild adventures on the island of Mallorca, Ibiza, the eastern coast of Spain, and eventually back to England. The story is based on actual events and real people. This will be another great travel guide into the culture and sights for anyone traveling to this part of the world.
